

We are a small but thriving building company located in the South West of England, dedicated to delivering high quality projects in partnership with our clients, whom we believe to be of utmost important.

Our dedicated team includes a wide variety of directly employed, quality craftsmen trained in traditional building methods. Added to that, our committed office team is eager to meet existing and new clients to discuss their requirements and to price all enquiries competitively, within a relatively short timescale.

Our portfolio of completed projects includes the following types of work, ranging from £100 to £500,000:

- Complex refurbishment and conversions
- Historical building alterations and repair
- Sympathetic barn conversions
- Property extensions (working with the occupier in situ)
- Property maintenance and small projects

We have been privileged to work on projects both large and small, covering a wide area, including St. Paul's Cathedral, and we have completed several projects for the National Trust, over the years, including Periwinkle Tea Rooms, Knightshayes Court, Old Blundell's School, and have recently completed the well-publicised refurbishment of the former home of the famous poet Samuel Taylor Coleridge in Nether Stowey.

Our team focus is to maintain the highest standard of workmanship and service delivery, whilst understanding our clients' requirements and communicating closely with them throughout the whole construction process.

We feel our approach to building sets us apart from our competitors and we welcome all opportunities to prove that we are able to exceed our clients' expectations.
